FOREWORD

It is the sincere wish of the Staff that the readers will constantly bear in mind the spirit in which this task was undertaken, and the object it was designed to fulfill. It is primarily intended to perpetuate the memory of our years of association together, and to immortalize the noteworthy deeds accomplished at Dublin High School.

To those who in any way contributed to the realization of this publication, we are deeply grateful. May the 1961 MAPLE LEAVES serve as a kind of token, inadequate indeed, of our sense of gratitude.

Appreciation, then, is our only reward. And if a perusal of the following pages will bring a smile to your face, or, if in the future, awaken memories of days that are gone, our labor will not have been in vain, and our MAPLE LEAVES will have been a success.

Philip,
It has been nice knowing a guy
like you these past years.
Boy, we had some times last year. I want to wish you the best of success in your future years.
to come. Have fun this summer and I'll see you next year.

This is a hope and a sincere effort to record forever...

SENIOR CLASS HISTORY

This was a symbolic day for one hundred and sixty young men and women. They were gathered together in the Dublin High School auditorium with all its newness and vastness to begin a new and hopefully promising career. To the one hundred and sixty students from seven minute grade schools, the enormous facilities of D. H. S. must have seemed completely untouchable and impracticable.

Many views and opinions, some of them the same, were expressed by the new eighth graders. Among these was the view of Sharon Farris, who was soon to be elected class president.

Although the vastness of the new school at first startled them, these boys and girls soon became accustomed to the daily routine of classes.

One of the important highlights of the fall was the well-attended football games that were usually followed by sock-hops. In spite of the fact that D. H. S. was without a senior class in 1955-1956, the team had a winning season and gained a basis for further glory in District VI circles.

The theme of the eighth grade dance was "Young Love." This was the first of the class dances for the group.

The crowning of Miss D. H. S. of 1956 provided a moment of glory for the class of '61. Miss Glenda Smothers was crowned Miss Dublin High by Carole McNeil, the previous queen.

Upon entering the ninth grade, there was a division among the students who had previously been studying the same subjects together in the eighth grade. Some of the pupils took the college preparatory course, while others took a course of general education.

The biggest highlight of the year was the winning of the first of two consecutive District VI championships in football.

The Sophomore year of the class of '61 was one of many honors for D. H. S. Among the honors received, perhaps the most significant was that of being undefeated, winning the District VI championship for the second straight year, and topping off the season with a 40-0 rout of arch-rival, Pulaski.

This was also a highly successful year for the music department. The Band, under the direction of Mr. Blaine Corder, compiled an almost perfect record in competition. Among these honors were top ratings in all of the band festivals in which they participated and receiving first place in the Vinton Dogwood festival. The Dukettes can be given credit for adding a tremendous amount of variety to the band, and they were duly rewarded for their efforts when they were judged the best majorette group in the Apple Blossom festival at Winchester. Many members of the band and four of the nine majorettes were from the class of '61.

The chorus, equally impressive, gained a No. 1 rating in competition and entertained the school throughout the year at various assemblies.

"Sophomore Circus" was the theme of the tenth grade dance, which marked the end of a highly successful year for Dublin High.

In their junior year, the class of '61 began rolling in high gear. This was the main step from being a lower classman to becoming an upper classman.

The Junior Class play, "Here Comes Charlie", was a moment of entertainment as well as a valuable money-making project.

In March the class rings, which the students had anxiously awaited finally arrived. This provided an air of excitement for the soon-to-be seniors and was the first real step toward reaching that goal.

The money received from the Junior play provided a most enjoyable banquet in May, of which the theme was "Maytime Melody."

SENIOR CLASS HISTORY

Students of the class of '61, in cheerfully giving their time, gaily decorated the cafeteria for the event. The Class of '61, who were the guests of the juniors, was welcomed by the class president, Larry McMillan, after which Dr. Moffat of Radford College gave a talk on "Spring."

The Junior-Senior Prom of 1960 was a long awaited event for the juniors. It was the first of two years that they were able to attend the fete with the distinction of being a member of one of the two involved classes. The theme of the prom, "Cinderella's Dream", was carried out in a gaily decorated fashion that completely refaced the gymnasium, and well met the approval of all who attended.

Business and pleasure were mingled together in the organization and staging of a mock convention by the government and history classes of D. H. S. Each of the government classes campaigned at school for a candidate who was actually running for the Democratic nomination for president. The experience and knowledge gained in actually participating in such a convention was invaluable to everyone, even though we nominated Stuart Symington for president.

In September, 1960, the class of '61 re-entered Dublin High for the last time as students. It had been a long wait, but the dream of becoming a senior had finally been realized. But still, there was the hope of graduation lingering in the minds of everyone. Each person knew that in order to attain this goal, he faced possibly the hardest year of his high school career.

To begin a busy fall, the seniors took a trip to the campus of the University of Virginia. After a fine showing by both teams, they saw the Cavaliers extend the nation's longest losing streak at the hands of V. M. I. to twenty-one games. The Boy's Beauty Pageant was a hilarious event that provided funds for the prom in the spring.

The prelude to the homecoming dance was the joyful victory over Christiansburg. After the victorious game, the homecoming celebration was topped off with the crowning of Nancy Cornett and Reggie Blankenship, both members of the class of '61, as Queen and King. This was one of many dances of the year that was well attended by everyone.

The government classes, as in years previous, did much to add pleasure to the daily routine. Among these pleasures were two trips: one to the polls on election day, and the other a journey to the courtroom in Pulaski to gain first-hand knowledge of the functions of our government.

This year the class of '61 was the guest of honor as the Juniors treated them to a banquet which was symbolic of a last testimonial dinner.

The final prom, long to be remembered, long to be dreamed about, but over too quickly, symbolizes the last formal gathering for a graduating class. For many who do not go to college, it will be the last dance. The joy, gaiety, and happiness of the last prom is a remembrance that will be easily recalled in the minds of all as a last farewell before graduation.

The school year is almost over and leaves time for only one more event before graduation-the Senior Sneak Day. This is the day for skipping school and not having to worry about Mr. Dobson catching us. Of course, everyone goes as a group, but it provides a last chance for fun.

Here it is-the final day of that final six weeks of that final year-Graduation! A long-awaited dream of parents, of teachers, and especially the students, has finally been realized. As everyone waits his turn to receive his diploma, thoughts of the last five years dance back and forth in a pattern of hard work and pleasure intermingled for a very worthwhile portion of life.

It is the point of debarkation and the climax to a great play. Yes, the end of the play as many of the boys and girls, now young men and women, will never meet again. It is a compelling thought for those involved, but the remembrance of the "best years of life" will be interred in the minds of the class of 1961 forever!

PROPHECY

The bright lights were flashing and the music from the merry-go-round could be heard all over town. The carnival was here! I was excited and full of anticipation as I hurried to the nearest tent. Above the tent, there was a sign with "Fortune Teller" painted on it. I entered the dimly lighted chamber, and before me sat an old Gypsy woman who held a crystal ball in her hand. I sat down, and as we gazed into the ball, there appeared before me scenes of years to come.

It seemed to be a busy day at the Pike Hospital in Dublin. Roger Pike, founder, was proudly explaining every detail to anyone who would listen. Manuel Collier and Paul Morris happened to be his victims at the moment.

Freddy Spraker went hopping through the door to be met by Dr. Maynard Sayers who was making his daily visit to the patients. After explaining to Doc Sayers that Margie Martin had slammed the door on his leg, Freddy moved on into the operating room.

In Room 13 lay Pat Solomon desperately trying to eat a five pound box of chocolates before her husband appeared with another box. In the room next to Pat, I could hear a loud howl as John Tucker received a shot from nurse Joann Armstrong while her assistants, Virginia Sayers, who was half asleep, and Frances Rupe, absorbed in a book, tried to hold him down.

Dorothy McDonald was madly chasing Barry Ritter down the hall to give him a sedative. At that very moment, an ambulance driven by Joanne Garlick wheeled into the driveway barely missing Frank Moore. Out of the vehicle marched Vernon McCoy, Eddie McCraw, John Linkous, and Phil Scott, laboring under the task of carrying Alice Cornwell into the hospital on a stretcher.

Nurse Linda Goad brought Baby Blankenship, with a tiny football clutched in his chubby hands, to his proud parents, Nancy and Reggy, who were anxious to start training him.

Rosalie Hylton, Betty Cecil, Loreen Tolliver, Elizabeth Weaver, Doris Flinchum, and Linda Crosier were trying to tell Larry McMillan that he was deaf and that he was the first to find out why the noise is so loud when the sound barrier is broken.

The picture slowly faded, but only to return just as vividly. However, the scene had changed. No longer was it the hospital but Dublin High School. Principal Tommy Stone came dashing out of the building to reprimand the late arriving Judy O'Dell who had been given a ticket for reckless driving and speeding by officer Ken Bagby.

Glenda Smothers, head of the English Department, was lecturing Jimmy Gaino, returning for his eleventh post-graduate course, on Macbeth. Sue Phillips, the home economics teacher, was patiently teaching Brenda Bolling to diaper a baby. The click, click, click, of the typewriter could be heard as Darlene Staples called A, S, D, F, and Charlotte Simpkins hit the pupils on the back and stomped their feet trying to keep backs straight and feet flat on the floor.

From the crystal ball, I realized the school office had changed, too. Linda Wheeling was rapidly taking dictation from Assistant Principal, Windell Graham, as he rattled as slowly as he could--200 words a minute.

Hugh Harris was disgustedly counting the money from the annual magazine drive. He was two cents off and you could see his hair graying by the minutes as he struggled. Dean Repass came chilling into the office from room 213 to complain about the cold heat from the radiator. Don Boitnott was quickly summoned and he came skiing down the icy halls to her rescue. Roslea Johnston was trying to convince her students that 15 and 25 really did equal 45.

A chord of b flat and c sharp came blasting out of the band room as Woodrow Maddy, band director, was teaching his pupils to play "Stars and Stripes Forever."

The smell of sulphur led me to Mary Coleman in the Chemistry Lab trying to find a new deodorizer for the little girl's room.

Later I could see many downcast looks after the students had raced to the lunchroom, only to find that fluffy rice and cheese were on the menu.

For an instant, I could see no picture in the ball because of a cloud of smoke covering it; when it cleared, I was in the thickly populated (at least 500 people) business district of Dublin. I realized the vale of smoke had been caused from Bill Bartley's plane as he wrote love letters in the sky to his wife, Jane. The air line hostess, Sylvia Miller, was leaning out the window trying to catch the letters to use them again.

I ventured into the biggest building in sight, and was led to the top floor in an elevator operated by the owner of the building, Larry Simpkins, who was trying to earn some extra money. On the top floor behind a door marked Lawton and Clevenger, Buddy and Kenny were walking the floor because Bill Thompson, Inc., would not deal with them. He absolutely refused to train their monkeys to climb.

PROPHECY

Around the corner, the secretaries were gathered at the water fountain for their daily gossip. Judy Jones was showing off her diamond and telling of her and Wallace's wedding plans. Adell Meredith and Wilma Rasnake returned with an account of their night at the concert. Wilma Kemp slid in the water which tumbled from the over-turned water container while Ella Riner didn't stop her description of a dress she planned to buy. Patsy Hurst came dashing out of her employer's office searching for someone to read her shorthand. Beulah Lefler, on her way to meet Kelly for lunch, didn't realize she had ink smudged all over her face. Prim Ann Brown breezely walked through the door with a stack of sketches of her latest fashions to display to Lake Linkous, utmost fashion designer.

At that moment, outside the building, a bus driven by Allen Quesenberry screeched to a stop. For once he wasn't early. Out jumped Mary McGuire with Junior in her arms, followed by eight more little ones. A bundle of packages squeezed out next under which groaned Bobby Martin prodded by Peggy O'Dell. Linda Shrewsberry hobbled out with one shoe on and one shoe off. She had taken her heels off to rest her feet, and Patty Siler's smallest child had thrown one of them out the window while Patty checked her groceries to see if she had them all.

Julia Webb and Betty Withers could be seen on the corner arguing over whether they should cross on red or green. Bonnie Arnold coming up to them decided they should cross on yellow.

Through the window of the drugstore, I saw Charlotte Atkinson eating a chocolate nut sundae with six empty milk shake cartons in front of her while Peggy Hamlin enviously ate her diet salad and talked of the newest bracelet fashion. Barbara Dishon came dashing in, anxious to tell of her latest husband.

Next door, the "Up-Side-Down Cocktail Lounge" was buzzing with activity as the early arrivals arrived. "Snooky" Cecil, with twelve cigarettes in his fingers, was teasing Brenda Moore about her last nights fling with Raymond Bell.

The pretty little cigarette girl, Jane Graham, crossed the room to give Sam Carter a pack of candy cigarettes.

What--Who is that being kicked out the door on his nose??? Why!!!! it's Maynard Hedge. I thought I recognized his voice. He must have been auditioning for the singing job.

Ah, that dainty little Fay Ann Anderson banging away on the piano surely can play those jazzy hits. Patsy Hanks is keeping up with the tempo considering the fact that she is singing "Brahm's Lullaby." Nancy Hamilton came strutting in hitting James Dunnigan, Rodney Shelburne, and Rudolph Shelburne over the heads with her baton. Waiter Tommy James spilled his champagne when he was tripped by Doris Harrell. Johnne Murdock and her husband were dancing the tango.

On the street again, I could hear the beat of the drums as a squad of soldiers, marines and sailors combined came marching down the street. I could recognize Private Sue Gray giving orders to Lt. Ernie Flynn, Capt. Charles Tuck, and Gen. Orville Akers. Hubert Dalton didn't hear taps that morning, and he was racing to catch up.

Carolyn McGraw, Charlotte Meredith, Jeanette Beamer and Kathleen Dulaney were congregated on the street, blocking all by-passers, while they chatted about the new lady president, Sharon Farris.

I wandered on down the street to the city park, where I immediately saw Estel Cox, city policeman, asking Jo Ann Cecil's two year old girl if she couldn't read the sign which said, "Stay Off the Flowers."

Garnett Buckland, Selma Woodyard, Linda Dishon and Sandra Blackwell were sitting on the newly painted bench that had lost its wet paint sign by the aid of Phyllis Blair's son, Doug, Jr. All these ladies were intently admiring their children.

Underneath the willow tree, Marie Snyder and Rachael Farris were discussing their wedding plans. Mare Showalter's little boy fell out of the tree in their laps.

Joyce Mabry, Shelby Shelton, Sue Shumaker and Bonnie Wampler were so dizzy from playing "ring-around-the-roses" that they did not notice that their children had disappeared ten minutes before.

The ball faded completely before my eyes. Dazed with what I had seen, I stumbled out of the Gypsy's tent into the night. Meeting with several of my school mates, I couldn't help wondering if some of these things might be continually striving for better SPORTSMANSHIP

The DUBLIN DUKES, in a year that was labeled rebuilding, came through with a surprisingly strong team. They completed the season with a 4--5 record, but this fails to show the real team. Only four seniors were on the squad this year, all of whom will graduate this June. These were Reggie Blankenship, Bill Thompson, Kenneth Clevinger, and Fred Spraker.

On September 2, the young Duke squad topped the Hillsville "Indians" 26 to 12. The following week, the penalty suffering "Duke 11" was beaten by Blacksburg 20 to 7.

September 16 saw the Dukes take to the road and down Galax 21 to 6. Two weeks later, Dublin played a hard game but lost to the strong Radford "Cats" 19 to 0.

October saw the "Dukes" come to life as they downed the Wytheville 11 13 to 12, and then in the major upset of the year downed previously unbeaten Christiansburg 19 to 14 to take its fourth straight homecoming game.

On October 21, the Dublin team lost to a fired up Pearisburg team 12 to 0. Then Dublin, suffering from sickness and various injuries, lost to a big team from Pulaski 33 to 7.

Dublin wound up the season with a strong championship team from Narrows. They lost 28 to 7, but played one of the best games of the season.

And so -- we salute you: Coaches, Staff, and mainly "The Big Dublin Dukes."

J.V. FOOTBALL

The Dublin High JV's completed their season with a perfect 8 to 0 record. The boys showed much enthusiasm, and a strong desire to win. With the addition of these boys, the chances of a bright future for next year's varsity seem apparent. With the excellent help of the coaches, the undefeated season was obtained.

HOMECOMING ACTIVITIES

Dublin High's DUKETTES and CHEERLEADERS prepare for Homecoming festivities.

Before the parade, much work must go into getting the floats ready.

At the close of the school day, the students gather for a pep rally.

Finally, the big moment arrives. A King and Queen are crowned.

After the game, a sock hop is held in the gym.

DANCES

DUKE DANCE BAND

In recent years, the young student musicians in the Public School of America have shown a great interest and aptitude for the types of music played by the big dance bands of the country. It has been agreed by the Music Educators that this is a healthy interest which leads to better individual musicianship throughout the instrumental music department. This led to the formation of the DUKE DANCE BAND.

The Dance Band with its 15 members was formed following football season under the direction of Mr. Charles Davis. Their activities included a trip to the Stage Band Clinic at Charleston, West Virginia, playing for school and local functions such as dances, pep rallies, and P. T. A.'S.

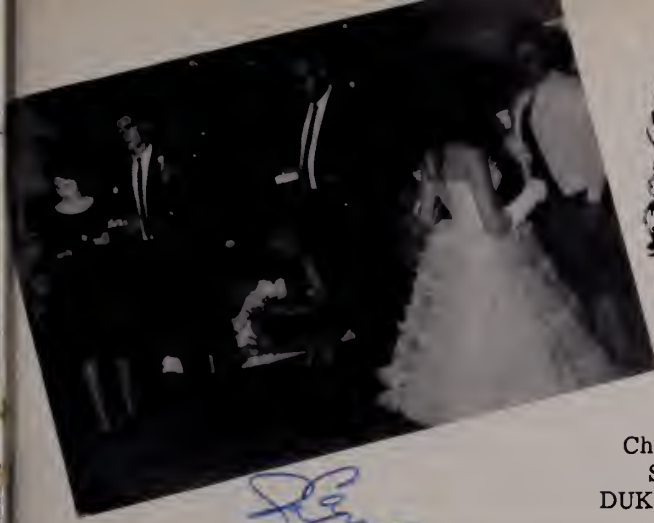

The members of the DUKE DANCE BAND are:

Woodrow Maddy	saxophone
Edward Simpson	clarinet
Walter Dobyns	saxophone
Bobby Herndon	trombone
Larry Hash	bass fiddle
Jackie Thacker	piano
Dennis Jennings	trumpet

Mr. Davis drums

Linda Blackwell	trumpet
Steve Vaughn	tenor saxophone
Butch Burns	alto saxophone
Greg Carpenter	french horn
Dale Hall	trombone
Avria Hall	trumpet
Eddie McDaniel	trumpet

To every man, regardless of his birth,
His shining, golden opportunity—
To every man the right to live,
To work, to be himself

Can combine to make him—
This seeker,
